

To kill for

There's a serial killer in town, and writers James Patterson and Ashwin Sanghi are out to get him. News is that the author of mythology-based thriller fiction and the American novelist famous for his series about fictional psychologist Alex Cross are about to co-author the Indian edition of the Private series. Private is one of Patterson's most popular thriller series worldwide, and is based around an exclusive detective agency, Private, led by Jack Morgan. Sanghi, the author of several historical and mythological novels, including The Krishna Key, says Private India (a working title) will be about a serial killer and is going to be inspired by true stories. While Patterson will add the thrills to the plot that will unfold in Mumbai, Sanghi is on board to give it the touch of the mythical. Doesn't it take two to tango?

